

WASHINGTON, DC – House Committee on Oversight and Government Reform Ranking Member Darrell Issa (R-CA) today launched “GovWatch,” the first-ever congressional committee iPhone app, harnessing cutting-edge mobile communications technology to boost transparency, accountability, and information sharing in government. GovWatch is now available free through the Apple iTunes store and is a one-stop-shop allowing users to interact with Committee Republicans across Facebook, Twitter, YouTube, Flickr and the Oversight and Government Reform Committee website.

Click here to watch Issa introduce GovWatch

“GovWatch will help foster a more open government for the American people, putting information about transparency and oversight efforts in the palm of the taxpayer’s hand,” Issa said. “This app gives citizens an easy-to-use, mobile window on Washington available anytime, anywhere.”

GovWatch gives taxpayers a hub from which they can download and share the work of the Oversight and Government Reform Committee Republicans, increasing the potential for crowd-sourced government accountability from millions of iPhone users.

Click here to view an online demo of GovWatch.

###